Program Justification

Provide a brief description of what changes are being made to the program.

This proposal is an elimination of the concentration in Painting for the BASA.

Why are these changes necessary?

The BASA is intended to be a broadly defined studio experience, allowing individuals to study art-making practices while allowing for maximum open electives to complete the degree. The BASA curriculum requires only 16 hours of A&D coursework in addition to the required first year curriculum. By contrast, the BFASA requires 45 hours of coursework in an area of studio art specialization. Students wishing to specialize should choose the BFASA.

Current concentrations in the BASA and the BFASA (Bachelor of Fine Art in Studio Arts) are identical. Despite the significant difference in degree requirements, this is a point of confusion for students. The School of Art and Design is in the process of completing our reaccreditation with NASAD, and the process has revealed the need for more differentiation between the degrees. Additionally, the BASA is not considered a professional degree, while the BFASA is. Therefore the standards are quite different for each degree. The NASAD standard for a BA in art states: NASAD standards make a clear differentiation between the BFA and BA in studio art. The BA is not intended or structured to deliver the depth of studio experience or specialization that the BFA requires.

NASAD standards state:

“The BA curriculum should aim primarily toward breadth of experience and understanding rather than professional specialization. The primary objective of such training is not necessarily preparation for a career in art or design.”

The BASA is considered a liberal arts degree and requires much less core coursework in art and design, allowing for more open electives outside of the School of Art and Design. Specialization in this degree is not attainable or expected.
